

SAYS DEATH HOUSE HELL ON EARTH

Raffaele Cascone, Three Years in a Sing Sing Cell,
Gets New Trial.

IS HOPEFUL OF ACQUITTAL

Praises Roland B. Molineux, Who Remembers Fellow-Prisoners With Cigars and Cream.

NEW YORK, June 22.—After spending two years, seven months and twenty-two days in the death house in Sing Sing, Raffaele Cascone, known as the "King of Mulberry Street," was brought back to the Tombs by the same deputy sheriffs, Delehan and O'Keefe, who took him "up the river" after his death sentence for the murder of Tigris Sinschelsel, June 3, 1894. The court of appeals has granted him a new trial.

"Good-bye, boys," called Cascone as he was leaving, to the seven other condemned men: "I wish you all a new trial."

He called every one by name with the exception of Lawyer Albert T. Patrick, to whom he has taken a great dislike. When Cascone reached the depot in Ossining he asked permission to send a telegram.

"This telegram," he said, "is to my boy. I have not seen him for a long time. He is a little over five years old now, and I want him to come and see me. He did come up several times while I was in the death house, but, you know, there I could not even shake hands with him. I want to have him with me as soon as he can come to the Tombs from Staten Island. Oh, how I long to kiss him."

Then Cascone sent this telegram: "God is good, Papa is out. Come and see me as soon as you can. With love and kisses from your father."

"RAFFAELE CASCONI."

"Talk about hell on earth," said Cascone to a reporter for the World, who rode with him in a train from Ossining to this city; "I have passed through it. No man will look up a dog as they look up human beings in the death house at Sing Sing."

Cigars From Molineux.

Cascone took two cigars from a packet.

"Do you know who gave me these cigars?" he asked. "They come from the best friend the poor men in Sing Sing's death house ever had. They come from Roland B. Molineux. Every now and then he sends us cigars and fine ice cream."

"Twelve men were taken out of the death house to be killed while I was there. I never heard any of them make an outcry. They take them out a little before 6 in the morning. The men will call to us and say 'Good-bye, and I hope you will all get a new trial.' Then you hear the door opened and closed, and you know that a few seconds later it is all over. I have cried, not because of fear that I would have to take my seat in the electric chair, but when I have heard the mother and the sister and the father and the children come in at that awful place and say the last farewell to the men who will die in a few hours. It is that that makes one shiver."

Cascone was carrying in his right hand a roll, which he never allowed to leave his hand.

"This is my best friend," he said. "It is a picture of the Madonna. It was given to me by a relative, and it hung in my cell during all these long months."

Despondent House Painter Made Sure of His Death

Committed Rash Act in Home of District
Coroner, Where He Was Employed to Paint the Interior.

Cold in death with his teeth buried in a rubber tube, through which gas had been flowing since Saturday, Isaac Roginski, a painter, forty years old, of 38 Petty street northeast, was found on the third floor of the home of Coroner J. Ramsey Nevitt, 1530 Calvert street northwest, late yesterday afternoon. Dr. Nevitt is out of the city on his vacation. Acting Coroner Glazebrook viewed the remains, and gave a certificate of suicide.

The body was taken to the morgue last night, and will be held there until Roginski's brother, a theatrical manager in Atlantic City, arrives in Washington and makes arrangements for the funeral.

Ill health and despondency over lack of funds and work are said by acquaintances of Roginski to have been the motives for his ending his life. He was unmarried and lived with his sister, Mrs. Minnie Goldberg.

Coroner Nevitt, to help Roginski get on his feet, gave him the job of painting the interior of the Calvert street house. Roginski worked several days last week. On Saturday, when he was last seen alive, he complained of feeling ill.

The room is small in which the body was found. The window and door were both closed.

When Joseph Clay, the coachman, opened the door yesterday afternoon and stepped into the house, he was almost carried off his feet by the odor.

He traced the odor to the third floor. He broke open the door and found Roginski lying rigid and lifeless on the floor. Clay notified the police of his discovery. Acting Coroner Glazebrook held the investigation. Morgue-master Schonenberger took charge of the body.

Get a "1900" Washer

The large shipment of "1900" Washers, which we have been expecting for some time, has just arrived and they are selling like the proverbial hot cakes.

A "1900" WASHER will wash a large tubful of dirty clothes in six minutes and wash them better than can be done in an hour's hard work by hand. It will not break or tear off any buttons and will not wear even the finest of fabrics.

The "1900" WASHER has a crank to turn—none of those hard grinding motions found on other "Washing Machines," and which are so tiresome and so destructive to the clothes.

The "1900" WASHER will almost run itself. It is so simple that a child can easily operate it.

Now we want to send one of these "1900" Washers to your home on 30 Days Free Trial.

If it is not all it is claimed to be, or, as some who have a "1900" Washer in their homes have said, "worth three or four times its cost," then send it back and it will cost you nothing. If you, like others have done, find you would not do without it, then

SCALPED FACTORY GIRL IS AWARDED $12,500

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 22.—Yawman and Erbe Company, of this city, has settled with Laura E. Stewart and her father for the loss of Miss Stewart's hair, for $12,500.

Two years ago, when Miss Stewart was in the employ of the company, her hair became entangled in a swiftly revolving pulley shaft, and her entire scalp was torn off. Since then she has undergone ten surgical operations, her life being saved by the successful grafting on her head of the skin from a live dog.

Miss Stewart and her father brought suit to recover damages, the daughter for injuries and the father for loss of his daughter's services. Papers were filed in surrogate's court today setting forth the terms of the settlement.

The girl lay in a hospital for months, the skin of the dog was removed and skin from different parts of the girl's body was transferred to her head, and has partially healed the wound, but no hair will ever grow on her head again.

MEN TO PAINT CHURCH; WOMEN TO COOK DINNERS

PLA'NFIELD, N. J., June 22.—Lacking the necessary funds, but possessed of the indomitable spirit, the members of the First Church of Christ have adopted a novel scheme to have their house of worship receive its annual coat of paint.

The men of the congregation have agreed to give a day's service in wielding the brushes, and the women will cook and serve dinner on the grounds at noon. The volunteers are being marshaled by Rev. Phil A. Parsons, an enterprising young clergyman and a graduate of a Western university, who will himself don overalls and jumper.

The workers will be divided into sections, each one under the direction of a foreman.
